

11 Tips for Giving Feedback WHILE TEACHING ONLINE

Read through the list below. Circle the ideas you want to try first. Star the ideas you want to try later. Cross out the ideas that won't work for your students or platform.

1

Start simple, so students don't feel overwhelmed.

7

Make expectations clear, so students know what to expect.

2

Ask open-ended questions to help foster discussion.

8

Provide group feedback to address overarching needs.

3

Spend time talking about in-progress work to show students their progress is valued.

9

Ask your students what they want feedback on so they feel their specific needs are being met.

4

Share your own work to help students see how you solve artistic problems.

10

Have students give feedback to each other so they can stay connected with their classmates.

5

Make it easy for students to respond to your feedback to create conversation.

11

Utilize videos and screencasts so students can hear your voice.

6

Keep feedback simple and specific to keep from feeling overwhelmed.

